

RELO IS PAYING GOOD DIVIDENDS FOR VAN'T NET

Amsterdam – last year Van't Net in The Netherlands decided to expand its corporate services into international relocation.

Headed up by Paul W. Daselaar the new division is doing well and picking up useful business, says the company. Recent appointments include (from left) Clementine Baan who handles legal matters for the new division and Monique van Bergen who is in charge of sales. On the right is Mr. Daselaar who says: "We see relocation as a great way to expand our services to our corporate accounts – and it's going very well."

ANGLO PACIFIC SCORES WELL IN RUGBY FINALS

London - as the Rugby League Football and Australian Rules Football seasons came to an end Anglo Pacific was able to count four of the teams it sponsored as League Champions.

Says Luke Fenney, Club President: "Anglo Pacific has offered its support for more than a decade now and we really appreciate this as well as the discounts they offer to our returning players when shipping their possessions back to Australia."

The company also supports the Hills Hoist team established by Australian expats living in west London in 2008.

Jason Diggs, Sales Director for Anglo Pacific says: "We like to form part of the local community including sponsoring expat sports teams - not to mention the fact that a handful of players also work for us!"

SONIGO TO THE RESCUE

Tel Aviv - Sonigo Shipping has been busy shipping high performance generators to the Cyprus Electric Company.

The first batch of nine generators were shipped with only eight hours notice, putting pressure on Sonigo's General Manager David Sonigo who handled the entire logistical operation – including trucking, loading and lashing - with barely eight hours notice.

"We dropped everything to make sure this shipment was loaded onto the next vessel to Limassol," he says.

As widely reported, a fire in a Cypriot naval base caused the explosion of ammunition and arms confiscated from a vessel en route from Iran to Syria. Some 12 people were killed and over 60 injured from the explosions. The also destroyed Limassol's largest power station, effectively blacking out Cyprus's second largest city.

"There may still be additional shipments of generators to help the Cypriot power company replace the capacity destroyed by the explosion in the naval base," says Mr. Sonigo.
